About ICCLR

Message from the Chair of the Board

Prof. Neil Boyd
Chair of the Board

The International Centre for Criminal Law Reform and Criminal Justice Policy (ICCLR) has had another active and productive year, though one shaped within the last month of the fiscal year by the events of the global pandemic. It has also been a year of significant administrative change. Joanna Nefs, our Executive Director resigned, effective March 31, 2020, to take on the role of Chief Executive Officer of AIDE Canada, an organization focused on autism and related disabilities. Joanna brought energy, expertise and enthusiasm to the Centre, and completed a number of important initiatives during her time with us, overseeing a reworking of our website and successfully obtaining a number of key grants for the Centre.

Dr. Peter German graciously stepped in as Acting Executive Director, effective April 1st of this year, with the resignation of Joanna Nefs, and I am confident that I speak for the full Board when I say that we are very pleased that he was willing to take on this responsibility, in addition to continuing as President of the Centre.

As we will be meeting virtually in September, rather than during our more usual June time slot, I am able to report that we now have a new Executive Director in place, after a search early in this fiscal year. We are very pleased to have Joanne Macri join ICCLR in this capacity, effective August 10th of this year. Joanne is a Canadian and U.S. trained lawyer who has been working in the United States for the past 20 years, most recently employed by the New York State Office of Indigent Legal Services as the Statewide Chief Implementation Attorney and Regional Initiatives Director.

We continue to receive a core of financial support from the Department of Justice (DOJ) and our financial position has remained stable. Our current funding from the Department of Justice will run to March 31, 2022.

Neil Boyd

A New Anti-Corruption Centre

In 2019, ICCLR's Board of Directors agreed to the formation of an Anti-Corruption Centre within ICCLR. This decision was made as a result of a number of factors, not the least being that ICCLR and Associates have been heavily engaged in anti-corruption work around the world for many years and by the absence of any similar centre in Western Canada. Vancouver is a gateway to Asia and North America and therefore serves as a pivotal location for such a centre. The recent emphasis on money laundering in British Columbia only accentuated this fact.

Corruption is a pervasive evil that impacts countries, particularly in the Developing World, in a similar fashion to war and famine. It leads to poverty, a lack of basic services, poor health and education, and reduced opportunities for the world's poor. The Developing World has often harbored the ill-gotten gains of tyrants and kleptocrats, placing great responsibility on all of us to right a terrible wrong. Quite apart from its international role, Canada is not itself immune to corruption, as evidenced by the recent SNC Lavalin controversy and prosecution.

The new Anti-Corruption Centre builds on project work, training courses, conferences and workshops, research, presentations and writing by ICCLR Associates over the past two decades. It is yet to be named and officially launched. The development of the Centre is being spearheaded by our President who was a Canadian delegate to the 8th Session of the Conference of the States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Corruption in Abu Dhabi and whose doctoral work centered on the issue of international asset recovery.

The Future

The foregoing are only a few of the many activities involving anti-corruption that occurred during the past year. We are currently framing what the Anti-Corruption Centre will look like when it is officially launched. We are also planning a conference on municipal corruption, as a five-year follow-up to an earlier conference which ICCLR sponsored. During the summer of 2020, we will bring two research students onboard to assist us on these endeavors.

Access to Justice

Access to Justice Metrics Colloquia

This year, ICCLR, together with the UVic Access to Justice Centre for Excellence (ACE) and Access to Justice B.C., co-sponsored two colloquia. The first colloquium convened in May 2019 in Vancouver to produce a high level overview of the access to justice data currently available from access to justice organizations and government institutions. It also served to clarify some of the potential obstacles, including privacy protection laws, to greater information gathering and sharing within the access to justice sector. In February 2020, the second colloquium in Victoria advanced the discussion particularly on privacy protection laws and the legal requirements surrounding the use of personal data for research and evaluation purposes. Colloquium participants endorsed in principle the possibility of creating a BC justice data commons. ICCLR Senior Associate Yvon Dandurand who developed the Access to Justice Measurement Framework along with ICCLR Associate Jessica Jahn (2017), delivered presentations at both colloquiums.

Impact Report for 2019/20

By the Numbers

The ICCLR Impact Report serves to measure our value to our partners and our impact in our areas of focus. There are currently 111 past and on-going projects loaded into our project tracker database that are individually being tracked under a set of key metrics. This year, we found that 30 organizations have worked and/or funded projects led by ICCLR Associates. We also celebrate this year the fact that ICCLR and its Associates have been involved in 54 projects whether it was providing technical assistance, analysis/ reporting or thought leadership around the world. We continue to work on issues of criminal law and criminal justice policy where data gaps are present, information is limited, and where meaningful positive change can occur when government policies are strengthened.

Telling Our Stories

ICCLR's long history of successful partnerships with authorities and civil society organizations all over the world speaks to the quality of our work and to our ability to continue to assist governments in developing and sustaining healthy, safe communities. Because of the nature of our work, however, we may not be able to report on the impact of our initiatives for some time after projects are completed. The following narratives describe some of the accomplishments of ICCLR and our Associates in previous years and share how the results of work we did then is being felt today.

Promoting Essential Justice and Policing Services for Women and Girls Subjected to Violence

In many parts of the world, violence against women remains a highly prevalent, socially tolerated and largely unpunished crime. ICCLR has, since its inception, acted as a bridge between the local, national and international criminal justice systems to build capacity to prevent and respond to gender-based violence. ICCLR Senior Associates, Eileen Skinnider and Ruth Montgomery had the opportunity to work with the following UN agencies: UN Women, UNFPA, UNODC, WHO and UNDP to develop Module 3: Justice and Policing of the Essential Services Package: Core Elements and Quality Guidelines for an Effective Response to Violence Against Women.

The Essential Services Package is currently being implemented in ten (10) pilot countries including: Cambodia, Solomon Islands, Kiribati, Pakistan, Viet Nam, Tunisia, Mozambique, Egypt, Guatemala and Peru with a view to supporting and advocating for their global rollout. There are also now an additional 46 'self-starter' countries using the Essential Services Package on their own initiative. An initial assessment of the Programme organized by UN Women and UNFPA found that the Essential Services Package has been recognized as a minimum standard for effective response to violence against women globally.

Module 3 has served as a foundation for the development of further global tools by UN agencies to assist justice providers deliver quality essential justice and policing services. They include the forthcoming UN Women-led handbook on gender-responsive policing and the forthcoming UNODC police response training manual developed by the UNODC Mexico office.

Module 3 has also been used as a foundational piece in the work of ICCLR Senior Associates, Ruth Montgomery and Eileen Skinnider. For example, the Essential Services Package served as guidance for an assessment undertaken in Namibia for UNODC to support the government of Namibia's efforts towards enhancing a coordinated multi-disciplinary cross-agency approach in responding to gender-based violence. It has also informed the Viet Nam National Guidelines for the Provision of the Criminal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code Towards Improved Access to Justice for Women Subjected to Violence that was supported by the UN Women Viet Nam Office. Its principles have been used as a guideline for the development of victim support services by the recently established Victim Support Asia network, to identify access to justice issues for women in rural and remote areas of the province of British Columbia, Canada and by a Canadian national working group to develop multi-disciplinary training to address the needs of victims of terrorism and mass violence events.

Monitoring the Performance of Canada's Criminal Justice System

Over the last decade, recognizing a sector interest public measuring the performance of the criminal justice system and the impact of criminal law reform, ICCLR has focused some of its work on the development of performance measurement tools and processes. ICCLR Associates contributed to the development of the UN Rule of Law Indicators (2011) and to international discussions regarding indicators towards Sustainable progress Development Goal No. 16 (Access to Justice) in the post-conflict context. followed by additional projects to develop key performance indicators for the criminal justice system, for criminal legal aid, and for access to justice in general.

In 2019, the Department of Justice Canada introduced the first performance monitoring framework for Canada's criminal justice system (State of the Criminal Justice System - 2019 Report). The framework is based on feedback from multi-phased consultations with criminal justice system partners, and technical support by ICCLR stakeholders and experts, Associate, Yvon Dandurand. Notably, the framework draws from a report coauthored by ICCLR Senior Associates, Yvon Dandurand and Alison MacPhail (Using Indicators to Help Improve the Justice System, 2014), and a reference guide produced by ICCLR in collaboration with the Thailand Institute of Justice (Justice Indicators and Criminal Justice Reform, ICCLR/TIJ, 2015). These same tools were also used as a starting point for the development of a iustice performance network (Military Justice Performance Measurement Metrics, A Measurement Framework, Office of the Judge Advocate General of Canada, 2019).

The UN Convention Against Transnational Organized Crime

Adopted by the General Assembly in 2000, the UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime is the main international instrument in the fight against transnational organized crime. After the UNCATOC was adopted there was still considerable debate regarding the best review mechanisms to adopt.

It was not clear which reporting mechanisms and tools should be utilized to give the convention the greatest reach and efficacy. ICCLR supported UNODC and the Assembly of the State Parties to the convention by developing: Reporting Guidelines for States Parties to the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime (2008), and Elements of a mechanism to review the implementation of UNTOC and UNCAC (2009).

After considering these options for several years, in October of 2018, the State Parties to the UNTOC adopted the "Procedures and Rules for the Functioning of the Mechanism for the Review of the Implementation of the UNTOC and its Protocols".

Funding Highlights

ICCLR is supported by the Department of Justice Canada through the Justice Partnership and Innovation Program. Additional project funding is provided by the support of charitable foundations, grant making bodies and other governmental and non-governmental organizations. 2020/21 Work Plan

We continue to follow the Strategic Plan approved by our Board in 2018, advancing programs and initiatives in a number of key areas, including access to justice, restorative justice, violence against women and children, corrections, and anti-corruption. As we continue with the current plan's objectives and action points, we do so in furtherance of our stated goals of demonstrating and sharing ICCLR's impact on criminal justice, diversifying ICCLR's financial model, and making the best use of our pool of talent and expertise. We hope to refresh the Strategic Plan this year, as we all continue to adapt to a changing world.

With many of our current objectives already complete, or well underway. will increasingly focus new horizons and on expanding our reach in already well-established strategic interest. This includes continuing collaborative projects at home and abroad, and with other members of the UNODC program network of institutes. The amazing expertise that we already posses among our associates in terms of anti-corruption work will allow us to advance our vision of an international. anti-corruption centre within ICCLR. We are confident that such a centre can play a significant role in the domestic and international fight against both corruption and money laundering.

We will increasingly focus on new horizons and expanding our reach in already well-established areas of strategic interest.
